Budget Locks These cheap but serviceable locks are ideal for holding scenic panels in place when access behind may occasionally be necessary. If the key is lost a flat screwdriver will get you out of trouble. Available in two sizes Often the locking arm just engages behind the stile but there is an option of purchasing a keep and also a forged T key.

| Budget Locks | code | each | per 10 |

COFFIN LOCKS

Roto Lock™ Butt-joint Panel Fastener Progressively draws panels together by means of an 8mm allen key [not provided] giving adjustability for manufacturing tolerances or gasket shrinkage. Helps provide air or water tight seals. Useful for quickly securing floor and wall panels. The latch requires a mortise 86x16x44mm deep and the receptacle requires the same size but only 32mm deep. These are exact sizes so some clearance may be needed. The pin fixings shown in the illustration are not supplied - just clearance holes.

| Roto Lock | code | each | per 100 |
|------------|--------|-------|---------|
| Latch | GEN143 | £3.39 | £293.00 |
| Receptacle | GEN144 | £1.55 | £137.00 |

Dual Lock™ Butt-joint Panel Fastener This version has a dual action hook which locks over a pin then draws it inwards. It has a positive locking and unlocking action with minimum force on the allen key. The latch and receptacle both require a mortise 94x16x45mm deep. These are exact sizes so some clearance may be needed.

CLIPS

Galvanised Pipe Clips These always cause mass confusion because they are labelled according to the nominal bore of the pipe! So a 1 1/2" clip fits a 2" outside diameter pipe. The trouble was some of you knew that!

Our new table below should sort out the confusion [unless they decide to change the packaging, which will cause renewed mayhem]. Hey, they are so cheap why not order both sizes just in case? See also conduit clips on page 2.54.

| Pipe Clips | labelled as | but fits! | code | each |
