

NAILS

We sell fewer nails nowadays, as many carpenters prefer to use screws and cordless screwdrivers. British nail manufacturers have all but disappeared under competition from China and Russia. Nails can still provide a quick and strong means of fixing, especially on glued joints with the nails dovetailed. Because of the low margins on nails and their high weight/value ratio, we are unable to offer free carriage on these products.

Galvanised Nails The galvanised surface on these nails not only prevents corrosion, but improves the grip and provides a very secure fixing, especially when dovetailed. For even stronger grip, we suggest using annular nails as an alternative. If there is a size not listed that you are keen to use, please ask and we will endeavour to find stocks for you.

CORRUGATED FASTENERS

Corrugated Fasteners [Wiggle Pins]

A quick fixing for a simple butt joint of two pieces of wood. Butt the pieces together and hammer in the corrugated fasteners, they are usually 'dovetailed' for strength. When making scenery flattage using these, it is advisable to use a triangular plywood 'plate' over the back of the joint, glued and pinned for extra strength. This method is often referred to as 'Dog and Biscuit'.

DOWELS

Star Dowels Useful as an economical method of securing mortise and tenon joints while the glue is drying. These fixings are considerably faster than draw pegs although nothing beats the durability of tapered wooden pegs driven through offset holes. Regrettably draw pegged joints seem to be a dying art. I'll shut up now.
